To manage inflation and maintain economic stability, the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) updates the repo rate periodically. This shift in monetary policy has significant implications for various financial instruments, particularly Fixed Deposits (FDs). For potential investors looking to secure their returns, this has a direct effect on long-term returns.

Taking conducive macroeconomic growth into account, the RBI has lowered the repo rate by 50 basis points in frontloading. Many banks are still providing FDs at the previous rate. Hence, now is the right time to book your FD so that you can still enjoy higher returns. Understanding why booking Fixed Deposit on the Wizely App now could be a particularly smart decision.

Understanding the Repo Rate and Its Impact

The repo rate is the interest rate at which the RBI lends money to commercial banks. It is a crucial tool used by the central bank to control liquidity in the banking system, manage inflation, and stimulate economic growth.

RBI has made two cuts this year, reducing the repo rate by 25 basis points each time. Before the February 2025 Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) meeting, the repo rate stood at 6.5%. With two subsequent rate cuts, the repo rate before this month's MPC meeting was 6%. With this reduction of 50 basis points, the repo rate now stands at 5.50%.

However, analysts at Goldman Sachs also anticipate that the repo rate will fall to 5.5% by the end of this year, within in the current rate cycle. Consequently, any change in the repo rate directly affects the investment made in FD.

Impact on Fixed Deposit Rates

The correlation between the repo rate and FD rates is direct. With lower repo rates, banks can borrow funds more cheaply from the RBI. Consequently, banks tend to lower their lending rates for various loans (home loans, auto loans, etc.) to encourage borrowing and stimulate economic activity.

While this is good news for borrowers, it also means that banks are no longer dependent on investors for funds. Therefore, banks typically reduce the interest rates they offer on fixed deposits. This comes as bad news for anyone planning to book an FD.

Window of Opportunity: Why Act Now

Banks and Non-Banking Financial Companies (NBFCs) tend to adjust their FD rates downwards after the repo rate cut. However, banks will still be offering relatively higher FD rates compared to what they may offer in the near future. By booking an FD now, investors can lock in these potentially higher rates before they decline further.
