The long-awaited demand of students at Jamshedpur Co-operative Law College has finally been fulfilled. In a significant move, the state cabinet approved the proposal to establish the college as a separate entity under Kolhan University. Previously, the law college had been functioning as a law faculty of Jamshedpur Co-operative College. This decision grants the law college an independent identity and allows it to receive grants directly, according to Jamshedpur Co-operative Law College principal, Jitendra Kumar.

Jamshedpur Co-operative College has been imparting legal education since 1970. In 2005, the college received permission from the government to operate the law faculty as a law college. However, as it was not an independent entity, the law college faced challenges in obtaining funds from the Bar Council of India (BCI) and the University Grants Commission

(UGC). With the approval to become a separate entity, the law college can now apply to the UGC for registration under 2F and 12B of the UGC Act 1965, making it eligible for funding. Additionally, the law college will receive permanent affiliation from the BCI, providing further recognition and opportunities for growth.

The decision to establish the law college as an independent entity brings several advantages. Firstly, the college can now have a better infrastructure and facilities for both faculty and students. Currently, the law college operates in a six-room building, limiting its capacity to accommodate the growing number of students. With the newfound independence, the college can expand its physical infrastructure to create a more conducive learning environment.

Moreover, the involvement of the Co-operative College management in the admission process of the law college will come to an end. This change ensures a fair and transparent admission procedure, allowing deserving candidates to pursue their legal education without any biases or undue influence.

The law college presently offers a three-year LLB course to graduates from any discipline. With the new status, the college plans to introduce additional courses to its curriculum. The principal mentioned the possibility of starting diploma programs in various legal fields once they have adequate infrastructure and support.

The transition of Jamshedpur Co-operative Law College into an independent entity under Kolhan University opens up numerous opportunities for its students and faculty. The college can now access funds and resources directly, enabling it to enhance the quality of education and overall learning experience. The permanent affiliation from the BCI adds credibility and recognition to the law college, making it an attractive choice for prospective law students.

The decision of the state cabinet to grant independent status to the law college is a significant milestone in its journey. It not only fulfills the long-standing demand of the students but also paves the way for future growth and development. With the support of Kolhan University and the newfound autonomy, Jamshedpur Co-operative Law College is poised to become a leading institution for legal education in the region.

In conclusion, the approval to establish Jamshedpur Co-operative Law College as a separate entity under Kolhan University is a momentous achievement. The law college can now operate independently, receive grants directly, and apply for registration with the UGC. This decision brings numerous benefits, including improved infrastructure, fair admission procedures, and the possibility of introducing new courses. The law college is now well-positioned to provide quality legal education and contribute to the development of the legal profession in Jamshedpur and beyond.
